

THE SONG WITHIN SEDONA

Reviews

"This movie is an inspiring reminder of the wisdom that comes from sharing our story with others and the power of independent film-making on a shoe-string budget. I loved the slow pans of Sedona. The editing was well done, creating a multi-layered montage. The score was powerful and kept on opening up my heart until I surrendered at last to a few tears. This is a must see film!"

"As each dynamic woman shares a personal story, of land and of being, a thread from each weaves a lovely cinematic tapestry that captures the artist, the spiritualist, and the individualism that is the core of sixteen Sedonans who arrived and stayed as if 'called' to a quest."

"Sedona has always been a place of spiritual refuge and beauty... Director Kathy Douglas takes the viewer through the lives of sixteen completely different women, all artists in some respect and intersects their amazing life-tales together with the landscape of Sedona ever in the background... The wisdom is disarming in its purity. It's difficult not to get caught up in the stories told... It's a rare journey that explodes with honesty and heartfelt sincerity as one story weaves into another, with Sedona ever-glowing as the backdrop. The simple peace of mind one experiences while watching and listening to each of these souls is mesmerizing. There is no way to describe the experience. It can only be lived." 5.0 out of 5 stars!

"This gorgeous visual investigation by first time filmmaker and Sedona resident Kathy Douglas, is an exploration of the basic belief wisdom is everywhere. The film highlights 16 extraordinary Sedona women whose stories teach, entertain and inspire. The filmmaker makes it clear that these women are just a few of Sedona's residents whose experiences are well worth noting. Through stunning cinematography which reveals the beauty of Sedona's breathtaking red rocks, music that lifts the spirit and monologues from women of sixteen different lifestyles this art piece/documentary gives us an experience that makes us pleased to be human. This film is indeed a reminder that within every community and within every individual there are treasures to be discovered."
